Notes on Contributors

Christiane Bailey est étudiante aux études supérieures à l'Université de Montréal. Ses intérêts de recherche tournent autour des conceptions de la vie animale dans l'histoire de la philosophie, particulièrement en philosophie allemande et française. Elle prépare actuellement une thèse sur les animaux chez Heidegger. (christianebailey@hotmail.com)

Lori Brown is a master’s student in the Philosophy Department at the University of Oregon. Her emphases are on American pragmatism and continental and feminist philosophies, especially as they relate to animality and environmental and animal ethics.

Brett Buchanan is Assistant Professor of philosophy and Associate Member of the Humanities Program at Laurentian University. He is the author of Onto-Ethologies (SUNY Press, forthcoming).

Peter Gratton is Assistant Professor of philosophy at the University of San Diego. The managing editor of Radical Philosophy Review, Gratton is the author of a number of articles in contemporary continental philosophy and African philosophy. He is also the editor, with John Mannousakis, of Traversing the Imaginary: Richard Kearney and the Postmodern Turn (Northwestern University Press). (pgratton@sandiego.edu)

Lisa Guenther is Assistant Professor in the Department of Philosophy at Vanderbilt University. She is the author of The Gift of the Other: Levinas and the Politics of Reproduction (SUNY Press, 2006). She is currently working on accounts of singularity in contemporary continental and feminist philosophy.

Josh Hayes is Lecturer in philosophy at Santa Clara University. He has published articles devoted to Heidegger and ancient philosophy in Existentia, Philosophy Today, and the Review of Metaphysics. He is currently completing a manuscript investigating the moral status of non-human animals in both the analytic and continental traditions.

Karen Houle is Associate Professor of philosophy at the University of Guelph. Her upcoming publications include an essay on Deleuze, Foucault and Marilyne Robinson's novel, Housekeeping, in Deleuze: Texts and Images, ed. Stivale, Holland and Smith (2008); and a piece...

Emma R. Jones is a doctoral candidate and teaching fellow in the Department of Philosophy at the University of Oregon. She works primarily in the areas of contemporary continental and feminist philosophy, with strong interests in psychoanalysis, philosophies of nature, language, and sexuality. Her current research, broadly construed, concerns the relationship between language and corporeality. She is particularly interested in the work of Luce Irigaray and other “French feminists” (such as Monique Wittig and Julia Kristeva) on this topic, as well as in how phenomenological discussions of logos, such as Heidegger's and Merleau-Ponty's, can impact these feminist discourses.

David Morris is Associate Professor of philosophy at Trent University, Peterborough, Ontario, Canada. His recent work focuses on the phenomenology of mind, body and nature, and on the genesis of sense. He is the author of The Sense of Space (SUNY Press, 2004) and of a variety of articles on Merleau-Ponty, Hegel, Husserl, and Bergson, and topics such as touch and animals.

Marianne Mays is a graduate student at the University of Manitoba, where she is completing a Masters in English (Creative). She is working on an intra-genre poetry, drama and essayistic thesis that blends critical and creative approaches. Recently her poetry was included in Post-Prairie, an Anthology of New Prairie Writing, ed. Jon Paul Fiorentino and Robert Kroetsch, and her poetry chapbook, UMBRELLA SUITES, was published by JackPine Press in July 2005.

Astrida Neimanis is a doctoral candidate in the Social and Political Thought Program at York University (Toronto) and teaches in the Women’s Studies Department at McMaster University. Her dissertation project, “Bodies of Water,” is a rhizo-phenomenological exploration of the ontological, feminist, ethical and ecopolitical implications of our bodies’ watery constitution. She is co-coordinator (with David Koukal) of EPTC’s Back to the Things Themselves! Doing Phenomenology workshops and a member of the PhaenEx Editorial Executive Board. Her creative writing has appeared in Descant, and alongside her academic pursuits she continues her work as an international consultant on gender and social policy for the United Nations.

Tracey Nicholls is Assistant Professor of philosophy at Lewis University in Romeoville, IL. Her recent work includes her own analysis of American empire, “George Bush’s Burden: Containing the ‘New World [Dis]Order’,” to be published in A New Kind of Containment: “The War on Terror,” Sexuality, and Race, an edited collection forthcoming from Editions Rodopi, B.V. (tracey.j.nicholls@gmail.com)
Kelly Oliver is W. Alton Jones Professor of Philosophy at Vanderbilt University, where she is also an affiliate in Women’s Studies. She is the author of over fifty articles and eight books, including Woman as Weapons of War: Iraq, Sex and the Media (Columbia University Press, 2007); The Colonization of Psychic Space: Toward a Psychoanalytic Social Theory (University of Minnesota Press, 2004); and Witnessing: Beyond Recognition (University of Minnesota Press, 2001). She has edited several books, including Recent French Feminism (Oxford University Press, 2004) and The Portable Kristeva (Columbia 1998; 2nd Ed. 2002).

Bryan Smyth is Assistant Professor in the Department of Philosophy at Mount Allison University. His research deals with the social and political dimensions of Kantian and post-Kantian transcendental philosophy.